Chicago offers some of the best dining in the world - I've said this before - so I am super excited to taste an assortment of Chicago's best fixins in one night at the LuxeHome Chill event on November 12th. It is an efficient use of my time, taste buds and most importantly, it's for good cause.

The Third Annual LuxeHome Chill event is an international culinary and wine event held to benefit the Respiratory Health Association of Metropolitan Chicago. They are bringing together wine makers from around the world along with the top Chicago Chefs to create a delicious, possibly nutritious and definitely charitable evening.

Not to downplay the cause component of this event, but as I continue to eat my way around Chicago, I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to taste the skills of many Chefs in one night. The restaurants involved range from The Bristol to Province and all the way up to Trump. I'll let you know if I'm able to eat right in the name of charity.

If you'd like to join me, support the Respiratory Health Association, sip wine and enjoy good eats, visit: luxehome.mmart.com to get your tickets!
